SWEDISH SWIMMER STEALS THE SHOW

TEL AVIV.—Shy, blonde 19-year-old Anita Zarnowicki, of Sweden, stole the show on the opening day of the 9th Maccabiah Games yesterday winning two gold medals for swimming and setting up two Maccabiah records.

The festival got off the mark in 16 sports, held in all parts of the country from Jerusalem (Judo) to Caesarea (Golf), Petah Tikva (Cricket) to Lefka (shooting) with football in Ashdod, Carmel, Hadera, Netanya and Ramat Gan.

The surprise of the day was Israel's six-wicket victory over Britain in the cricket opener. But Britain held Israel to a 2-2 draw at football.

Five new Maccabiah records were set up at swimming at the Gaiel Gai pool before 1,000 spectators. This surprised the experts who had anticipated a far lower level of performance than in the "Mark Spitz Maccabiah" of four years ago.

Sweden, South Africa and the U.S. each captured two gold medals in the pool.

Anita Zarnowicki surged to victories in the 100m. freestyle and 200m. backstroke, followed home in each race by two American girls. She covered the 100m. in 62.9 seconds, beating Kathie Coles' 1966 record of 63.4 secs. In the backstroke she timed 2:35.8 minutes to shatter Yvonne Tivolis' 1969 record of 2:41.1 mins. in both swims she led from start to finish.

Anita and her twin brother, Benji, also a swimmer with the Swedish team, were born in Sweden, and live in the village of Falm, Anita is a student and represented Sweden at the Olympics Games last year, where she took 6th place in the relay, 12th in the 400 metres medley and 13th in the 200m. medley. This is her first Maccabiah.

Another most impressive performance in the pool was set up by 16-year Springbok Carmel Goodman in the 200m. breaststroke. She beat Wendy Paskin of the U.S. and Zippora Shamir of Israel, in 2:56.4 minutes.

Carmel has been in competitive swimming for seven years and has represented South Africa against Australia and Rhodesia. She trains seven days a week, and is the only member of her family who swims competitively. "I like this pool," Carmel said about Gaiel Gai.

The second Johannesburger to strike gold was 17-year-old Ivor Gordon, whose new Maccabiah record time in the 200 metres backstroke was also his personal best. In the heats too, he broke the 1961 record of Peter Fogarassy (U.S.) of 2:38.1 minutes, and when asked what it feels like to break two records in one day, said "really fantastic, never felt so good in all life." He timed 2:37.4 mins. to win from 26 Sedulson of the U.S. and Yoel Kende of Israel.

Yoel Latz of the U.S. had a tremendous battle with his team-mate Michael Cook in the 100 metres freestyle. Latz was well ahead at the halfway mark, but Cook came with a great finishing burst, which just failed to peg back Latz. The winner timed 55.4 seconds and Cook 55.5 secs. Robert Strauss of Mexico was third in 56.4 secs. It was Jeff Latz' best time of his career, his previous best being 56.4 secs.

Latz, 20, is a student at Arizona University, and trains four hours daily, getting up at 6 a.m. to do so. His parents were present to see Jeff win the gold medal.

The American quartet of Cook, Andrew Lehner, Devon Reitz and Latz set up a new Maccabiah record in the 4 x 200 m freestyle relay, 11 seconds better than the 1969 record of the Mark Spitz-led U.S. squad. Cook, of Harvard, swimming first leg, set up a new Maccabiah 200 m record with 2:02.5 minutes. The team's time was 8:19.5 minutes.

In this race, there was close struggle for second place between Canada, South Africa and Israel. The South Africans managed it in 8:30.8 mins.

Reporting the swimming events for a British newspaper was Suzy Halter (Nador) of London, a former Olympic swimmer for Hungary. She swam in three Maccabiahs and won three gold medals at the 1950 one. Yesterday, she watched her 17-year-old son, Ardy, swim for Britain.

The organization of the swimming, the main event of the opening day, left something to be desired, and arrangements for press coverage were chaotic and primitive. Maccabiah programmes, selling at IL2 each, contained innumerable mistakes in names and times. Irresponsible strong-arm methods and rudeness of attendants were offensive to the Maccabiah participants, and their families, many of whom had come thousands of miles, as well as the press.

Britain wins first gold

RAMAT GAN.—Britain's marksman Donald Bester yesterday morning won the first gold medal of the Ninth Maccabiah, when he scored 592 points (out of a possible 600) from the prone position with a small-bore rifle.

Israeli competitors took both the second and third places in the event here, with Nehemia Shikles collecting 590 points and Henry Herzhkowitz 586.

The team competition was won by Israel, with a total of 2,332 points. The next two places went to the U.S. (2,303) and Britain (2,289).

SOCCER

U.K., Israel draw

TEL AVIV.—Britain brought off a fine result at soccer yesterday in holding Israel to a 2-2 draw. Israel took the lead in the first minutes with a goal by Schwartz, but Ray Nesbit equalized after 26 minutes. Peretz again gave Israel the lead midway through the second half, but British pressure was rewarded with another goal by Nesbit shortly before the end. A crowd of 2,000 saw the match in Hadera, in which Israel fielded the junior national team.

Argentina and Holland drew 1:1 at Carmel. David Alapaky scored the first goal for Argentina in the 55th minute and Loontjens equalized in the last minute of play. Brazil beat Peru 2:1 and Chile drew 3:3 against Sweden.

Men's table tennis preliminaries (at the Tel Aviv Hilton Hotel): (Pool A) Germany 5—South Africa 0; Sweden 5—Australia 4. (Pool B) Brazil 5—Finland 4; U.S. 5—Austria 3. (Pool C) Canada 5—Italy 0; France 5—Italy 0; Canada 5—Greece 0.

Women's final pool in table tennis: South Africa 3—U.S. 1; Germany 8—Israel 1.

S.A., Australia, ahead in bowls

The Maccabiah bowls tournament got under way yesterday at the Ramat Gan and Savoyon greens with Australia, South Africa, Rhodesia and Israel participating.

In men's singles matches Australia defeated Israel 22-16 while South Africa came through 21-8 against Rhodesia. The games, on a double round-robin basis, continue today.

Who says the Middle East is in turmoil? The gentle game of bowls is in progress at Savoyon yesterday.

PETAH TIKVA.—A swashbuckling 120 by Tony Wiseman took Israel to a dramatic six-wicket victory over Britain in the opening match of the 9th Maccabiah's 50-over cricket tournament at the Gaiel Tikva Hapoel ground near here yesterday.

This is the first time that cricket is being played at the Maccabiah. Batting first, Britain paced their scoring well, and helped by shoddy Israel fielding, went to a formidable 225 for nine.

Going in at number six, Mundy played a captain's innings of 65 not out, after Gershon, Davis and Geller had all reached the 30s.

Israel's paceman Nishim Reuben finished with four for 39, while new vice-captain Moshelblat took two wickets with his legspinners.

Israel seemed to have missed the bus when, before the tea break, operators Wiseman and Kowarsky were restricted to a peccary 44 runs in the first 25 overs.

After tea, however, the batsmen went on a rampage. In a brilliant display of hitting, Wiseman raced passed his century with six sixes and numerous fours, while Reuben showed his all-round worth with an invaluable 52 which included three sixes.

Finally, Klein contributed an undefeated 25 as Israel raced to 229 for four in 48.2 overs, with the luckless British players showing clear signs of fatigue in the intense heat.

Present at the match was the Australian Ambassador, Mr. Rawdon Dalrymple, and representatives of the British Embassy and South African consulate.

The Maccabiah cricket tournament, which is being played as a league, continues today with Australia meeting Britain at Gaiel Tikva, and South Africa and the U.S. playing in Ashdod. (Both matches start at 10 a.m.)

In the light-heavyweight class, Terry Farnsworth of Canada took the silver, and Patrice Levy of France and Daniel Zaken of Brazil split the bronze.

The judo contests, played at the Hebrew University gymnasium under heavy police guard, continue today, and move to Tel Aviv tomorrow.

Some resentment was expressed yesterday by members of the four teams taking part in the judo finals, when they were refused permission to enter the university's swimming pool, which is restricted to paid members.

Knesset c'ttee raps plan to suspend driving licences of narcotics offenders

A proposal to revoke the driving licences of convicted drug abusers for a minimum of 12 months faced considerable criticism yesterday in the Knesset Economic Committee, which was discussing a draft amendment to the Traffic Ordinance on the drug problem.

The committee, which handles all transport matters, asked the Transport Ministry to revise the draft in accordance with the criticism.

The Health Ministry's chief psychologist, Dr. Yitzhak Montag, was quoted by an official communiqué as saying that "most drug abusers are mentally disturbed," and cannot drive carefully, so their licences should be revoked to prevent accidents.

District Court Judge Shlomo Loewenberg, chairman of the National Council for the Prevention of Road Accidents, attacked the draft amendment, saying the suspension of licences should be left to the courts to decide.

Economic Committee chairman Avraham Shechterman said the law should distinguish between possessors of drugs and consumers, with regard to penalties involving driving licences. In general, Mr. Shechterman doubted whether the Traffic Ordinance should be utilized to cope with offences covered elsewhere in law. He also inquired what the Health Ministry had established in its study of the effect of tranquillizers on drivers.

Dr. Montag said Israel was one of the best countries in the world for studying the effects of drugs on drivers, because alcoholism — which might have distorted the findings — was virtually non-existent here.

Dr. Ben-Meir's request, which may be rejected by the Alignment, indicates support for the ex-Radi wing of the Alignment, in its bid to put more teeth into Labour's policies in the occupied territories after the elections.

A university spokesman told The Jerusalem Post last night that guards at the pool were the only ones approached, and that no effort was made by Maccabiah officials to make arrangements for the use of the pool by the athletes. Nevertheless, he said, the University has already offered to make an arrangement for access to the pool by Maccabiah athletes.

Jordan restricts officials' West Bank holidays

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter The Jordanian Government yesterday asked the various ministries to "restrict" visits by their officials to the West Bank under the Israeli Summer Visits Scheme.

Amman's "Ad-Dustour" newspaper said the move was ordered by the Minister for West Bank Affairs, Taher Al-Masri, who complained that "too many" government officials had applied to go to the West Bank for their summer holiday. He explained that these visits should be limited to genuine family visits.

Raya to strike outside Knesset

Jerusalem Post Staff Archbishop Joseph Raya, head of the Greek Catholic Church in Galilee, will start a hunger strike outside the Knesset Monday, demanding permission for former Birin and Kirit villagers to return to homes from which they were evicted in 1948.

Knesset Speaker Yisrael Yehyahu yesterday threatened a one day demonstration on Monday on the building, but declined to permit a hunger strike, saying it was not provided for in House rules.

Several dozen ex-residents of 11 two villages on the Lebanese border intend to strike alongside Archbishop Raya.

(The Government last year made a final decision banning any return to Kirit and Birin. The reason cited was the security risk involved because of proximity to the border and the fear that the precedent in such a case would prompt demands from dozens of Arab villages evacuated from other border zones.)

Sixth suspect remanded in opium haul

Jerusalem Post Reporter TEL AVIV. — The sixth suspect linked to the discovery of 22 kilograms of opium near a used car lot here last week was remanded for 10 days yesterday by Tel Aviv Magistrate Yosef Megory-Cohen.

He is 41-year-old Mamoun Waheba, a salesman employed on a commission basis at Sam-Car, the used car lot near where the opium was found.

Police prosecutor Rav Sami Elshon Shlomo Tawfiq told the magistrate police suspect that Waheba is connected with the drug peddling ring.

Tel Aviv police spokesman Sgan Nitzav Amos Arshon told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that the police had decided to black out all news of the investigation.

The commander of the Tel Aviv Police, Nitzav David Ofer, denies reports in a morning paper yesterday that the drugs came from a small Beduin village on the Golan Heights.

Other reports, which have not been denied, said the drugs came from Lebanon and were smuggled into the country for distribution in Israel and the administered territories, and for export abroad.

No quorum to hear protests on hotel project

Jerusalem Post Reporter
Opponents of the proposed El Al Hotel in Jerusalem's Omariya plot were invited to express their views publicly yesterday at a special session of the Local Planning Subcommittee. The session never got started, however, because only one of the 11 committee members appeared.

Some 80 opponents of the hotel proposal turned up for the meeting in the Municipal Council chambers, including residents of Talbiya, members of the Council for a Beautiful Jerusalem and Hebrew University professors. Also on hand were representatives of the hotel promoters. The lone member of the subcommittee to appear was its chairman, Elisha Markovitz. He apologized for the absence of a quorum.

The session has been postponed until next Monday.

Normally, the Committee receives only written depositions from persons objecting to building projects. Mayor Kollek announced last month, however, that opponents of the controversial hotel project would be given the opportunity to appear in person.

When informed that only one committee member had appeared, Mr. Kollek expressed regret that members of the Council failed to appear regularly at committee meetings.

Persons objecting to the construction of the 350-room hotel maintain that it would block a fine view and use up space that should be devoted to a park.

PARK VANDALIZED — A small park completed in the Jerusalem alumni quarter of Musrara Sunday was destroyed by vandals Monday night. Fifty-five young trees were pulled up, as were 80 plants and the park's three benches. A Municipality spokesman estimated the damage, discovered yesterday morning, at IL10,000. The park is at the corner of Hanan and Elin Het Streets.

Arlosoroff murder debated during Knesset 'budget survey'

By ASHER WALLFISH
Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

The mysterious 40-year-old murder of Jewish Agency political secretary Elisha Arlosoroff on the Tel Aviv beach was the highlight of yesterday's Knesset debate on the work of the Justice Ministry (in the framework of the annual budget survey).

Gahal spokesman Benyamin Halevi said the trial of Avraham Stavsky and Zvi Rosenblatt (of Brit Habayit) was virtually a "mock trial," in the light of revelations by the late Yehuda Arzi — one of the police officers investigating the case — who was also a key Hagana member.

Dr. Hilevi, a former Justice of the Supreme Court, said that, although the accused (who were both Revisionists) were acquitted of the murder, their names must be cleared for all to see. If this could not be done by a new trial — the answer must be a commission of inquiry, he said.

The Arlosoroff murder was not out of the news. The need to make justice prevail could not be superseded by passage of time. The Hagana leader 12 years ago sought to establish facts dating back to 1933, when Hitler came to power, he said.

The charge against Stavsky and Rosenblatt was "blood libel," Gahal leader Menachem Begin called from his seat.

The Alignment's Haim Zadok and Ari Ankori pointed out that, whereas a new trial was out of the question once the accused had been acquitted, the Commission of Inquiry Law only referred to matters of urgent, present public interest. They noted that Gahal only raised the issue now because of the approaching Knesset elections.

The Alignment's Moshe Carmel called out from his seat that Gahal wanted "to show, not to inquire."

Gahal's Menachem Yehudi shouted back: "You're scared of the truth!" Mr. Zadok said that, if Gahal felt justice had not been done, it could not demand that the Government or a commission of inquiry dispense justice. Under the Israeli system, only the courts could dispense justice; and the court had acquitted the accused.

The Arlosoroff case should be a topic for historical research, if anything, Mr. Zadok said.

The Aguda's Rabbi Menachem Porush devoted the beginning of his speech to charges that the Hagana in Jerusalem murdered Aguda leader or Ya'akov de Hahn nearly 50 years ago. The leaders should admit their guilt and do penance, he suggested.

(De Hahn, who was killed near Shimon Dolek hospital, was rumored to be Hagana circles to be working hand in hand with the British administration and the Arabs.)

Justice Minister Y.S. Shapiro said in the survey that crime in Israel was becoming more widespread, more sophisticated, more outrageous, and more brutal. It was no consolation that organized crime did not exist here, he said.

Threats against prosecution witnesses were becoming frequent, too. Yet the remedies which some people suggested against this phenomenon were too radical to be used without hesitation, he said.

The courts, especially the district courts, had a heavy burden of cases, Mr. Shapiro said. But he did not think appointing more judges was the solution. There is a lack of courtrooms, prosecuting lawyers and administrative staff. The best way was to streamline the work of the courts, he said.

Replying, Mr. Shapiro implored Gahal in conciliatory tones not to reopen old wounds.

The wounds of 1933 were felt painfully on both sides, he said. "For our nation, in a state of siege as it is, it will be painful for everyone if this matter is not left alone."

The Minister said that while some people were still as convinced as ever about the guilt of the two Revisionists, Stavsky and Rosenblatt, others were just as convinced of their innocence. The late Yehuda Arzi had said nothing at all new in his report on the Arlosoroff investigation to his British superior (made public in the press last month). Mr. Shapiro stressed there was absolutely no question of a commission of inquiry being set up to study an issue which was not contemporary.

Circassians get U.S. expert to teach them their language

Jerusalem Post Reporter

KAFR KAMA — An American world expert in the Circassian language, Prof. John Catford of Michigan, has arrived in this village for a stay of up to two months to instruct teachers and intellectuals of the Circassian community of Israel how to read and write their own native language.

The Circassians, who are Moslems, left Russia about 100 years ago to escape the oppression of the Czarist regime, after their country was taken from the Turks. They speak their language among themselves but have never learned to write it. At their (state) schools, Arabic, Hebrew and English are the only languages taught.

In their quest for instruction they tried to learn from Circassian radio broadcasts in the Soviet Union. But when this failed, they turned to a neighbor, Education Minister Yigal Alon of Ginosar. The Ministry of Education found Prof. Catford, who was invited to help.

If this experiment succeeds, Circassian will be taught in schools here and at Rehovot, in Upper Galilee.

The number of Circassians in Israel is about 3,500. They serve in the army and in the police. Circassian uses Cyrillic script, as does Russian.

A DRIVER LOST HIS HAND Monday evening, when the car he was driving sideswiped an oncoming horse-drawn wagon on the Megiddo-Afula road. The driver, Yohai Kimhi, 37, of Kibbutz Elin Harod, had his left hand extended out of the window at the time, and it was chopped off by the wagon.

New plan would cut rates for large families in Haifa

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA — The Municipal Executive decided yesterday to exempt families with eight or more children from municipal taxes, and to cut the rates for families with four to seven offspring.

The proposal will be presented to the City Council as a by-law.

The new system will eliminate the present complex method of calculating the various tax according to the number of children and dwelling rooms, and will remove the social-stigma stigma from large families.

The new plan was devised by the Danino committee, named for city councillor Avraham Danino who decided yesterday to exempt families with eight or more children from municipal taxes, and to cut the rates for families with four to seven offspring.

A family with at least four children will have the tax on one room sliced off its total bill, so that a family with a two-room flat, for instance, will pay taxes as if for one room.

Families with five to seven children will receive a remission on two rooms, and families with eight children will pay no tax.

Haifa's municipal rates average IL20-IL40 a month. The new method will cover about 3,000 families, of whom 600 will receive full exemption. Mr. Danino proved to the committee that the loss in revenue would be negligible, compared with the social reform it promised.

Mr. Danino told The Jerusalem Post that the committee, headed by Haifa Mayor Yeruham Zisel, would continue its work and seek large-family status for other municipal charges as water rates and school fees, which are also calculated at present by welfare tables.

Couple held for fraud, smuggling

TEL AVIV — A man and a woman, both employees of a local clothing shop, were remanded for seven days in the Magistrate's Court here yesterday on suspicion of being part of an international gang engaged in smuggling and fraud.

Police say Yael Landau, 40, and Leon Afjman, 30, were arrested following a complaint by a Belgian tourist that they cheated him out of $10,000 with a fake offer to sell him diamonds. When interrogated, they allegedly admitted smuggling diamonds and foreign currency in from Europe, but denied having received money from the Belgian tourist.

Yael Landau, according to the tourist's story, offered to obtain for him diamonds from Eastern Europe; and he paid her $4,000 as an advance. Shortly afterward, she and Afjman appeared at his residence in Belgium and, after telling him they were on their way to Czechoslovakia via Germany, got $6,000 more from him. Several weeks later, the tourist said, he received a phone call from Yael Landau from Tel Aviv, in which she said she had been in a road accident in Czechoslovakia, broke her legs, and had her valises confiscated — together with the diamonds. He thereupon travelled to Israel, he said, and discovered the entire story was a hoax.

Though the suspects denied the allegations, they were remanded in order to enable the police to investigate further the suspicion that an international gang is involved.

Police arrest recidivist in bar brawl

TEL AVIV — Eli Bolkin, the 29-year-old recidivist with a record of at least 13 convictions for theft, robbery and assault, is in trouble again. He was remanded for 15 days yesterday by Magistrate's Court Judge Yosef Magory-Cohen on suspicion of possessing a loaded pistol. A police representative said Bolkin entered a night club in Rehov Hayarkon Monday night brandishing a pistol. Police were called after Bolkin chased all the customers out of the club.

Police said they used tear gas to subdue him, but it "had no effect." He was finally taken into custody after several policemen struggled with him. His pistol was cocked with a bullet in the breach, police said.

Bolkin's lawyer, Elisha Kedar, said his client had been drunk. Bolkin has been in frequent trouble with the police since he was acquitted, on appeal, of the murder of 16-year-old Shoshana Fligelman, after a sensational nine-month-long trial in 1965-66. (Tim)

LOTTO WINNERS

TEL AVIV — The six winning numbers in this week's Lotto draw are 03, 04, 16, 18, 33, 38. Mifal Hapayis announced yesterday. The additional number, which Mifal Hapayis adds, is 30.

The company paid IL490,394 for the first prize, IL28,960 in second prizes, IL57,920 in third prizes, IL86,881 in fourth prizes and IL231,682 in fifth prizes.

Katzir gets moon rock from President Nixon

President Katzir holds up the plaque with the moon rock which was presented to him by U.S. Charge d'Affaires Owen Zurhellen (left) yesterday, on behalf of President Nixon.

Jerusalem Post Reporter

A tiny piece of moon rock and a small Israeli flag taken to the moon and back by the astronauts of the final Apollo mission were presented yesterday to President Ephraim Katzir by Owen Zurhellen, outgoing charge d'affaires of the U.S. Embassy.

In a ceremony at the President's Residence, Mr. Zurhellen said President Nixon had asked if the rock could be exhibited in the Israel Museum or some other place where the public would be able to view it. President Katzir said such an exhibition was already being contemplated.

He termed the moon rock "a symbol of American scientific genius and achievement."

"I don't know of any accepted formula for expressing gratitude for receipt of a piece of the moon," he said. "It's a rather extraordinary gift."

President Katzir quoted President

Nixon as saying that if there can be international cooperation in space it should be possible to achieve international cooperation in bringing about peace on earth. The Middle East, he said, was in special need of such cooperation.

Mr. Zurhellen took the occasion to extend an invitation from President Nixon to President Katzir and the Israeli people to visit the U.S. in 1976 to participate in that country's 200th anniversary. President Katzir noted with a smile that both the U.S. and Israel had achieved independence from the same country.

Tanker burns in new Cambodia fighting

PHNOM PENH (AP). — Five oil tankers and an ammunition barge ran a gauntlet of insurgents' fire to reach Phnom Penh Monday night, leaving another tanker burning and abandoned 44 kms. down the Mekong River.

The convoy sailed in under an umbrella of American Phantom and Corsair jets which strafed Khmer Rouge gun positions lining both banks of the waterway for some 24 perilous kilometers. Rebel gunners raked the convoy with 75 mm. recoilless cannon, armour-piercing rocket and small arms fire.

The Mekong Trader was hit and set ablaze as it rounded Koh Ta-chor Island three kms. above the Cambodian river base of Neak Luong where the river follows into an ideal ambush position.

The vessel was beached on the island and the Filipino crew taken off by Cambodian Navy gunboats. One crewman was wounded.

More than 100 Government troops were reported missing yesterday following the fall of an outpost at Chilea, nearly 49 kms. north of Phnom Penh.

There have been other reports too of heavy fighting.

Meanwhile, the Vietnamese delegation to the ICOS said yesterday it has received assurances from the Canadian peacekeeping delegation that the South Vietnamese Government has pledged to stop all military activity in the area where two Canadian ICOS officers have been held since June 28. ICOS sources reported yesterday that "some progress" has been made in negotiations for the return of the two Canadians.

PROMISE BY NEW HAIFA MAYOR

More housing for young couples

By YA'ACOV ARDON
Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — Accelerated development, including housing for young couples, coupled with "the prudent financial management which has won the Municipality the respect of the authorities and the banks" will continue to guide the city executive for the end of its term, newly elected Mayor Yerulam Zeisel, said yesterday at his press conference in his new post.

As deputy mayor, he often acted for the late Mayor Fileman during the Mayor's frequent illnesses in the last two years.

After screening of 678 applicants, 549 couples now remain on the housing list, and 215 of them will win a home this month in a public drawing for flats in various parts of the town, mainly on Mt. Carmel, he said. Married couples with two children have been given priority, with a descending scale for those with one child, no child and yet to get married. More housing for the young is one of the main concerns of the city executive today, Mayor Zeisel said.

Next month, the executive will present an IL75m. development budget proposal for 1973/74 to the city council. It calls for continued construction on urgently needed traffic arteries, such as the road between Neve Sha'anan down to the Bay area, over a bridge across Nazareth road; the autostrade extension up to Mt. Carmel, through Rehov Freud, the approaches to the new Egged and railway stations, the new Government (Rambam) hospital and the port, all at Bat Galim; the second Bailey bridge across the Kishon; and a new access road to Haifa port from the east, near the She-men beach.

The city also plans the construction of sidewalks on gaps left at empty plots, through interurban districts by the municipality. The National Parks and Nature Reserves Authorities will join the city in an IL250,000 grant towards a wildlife reserve in the Mt. Carmel Park. Mayor Zeisel also promised a number of new public gardens in various parts of the town. The construction of schools, extensions and 36 new kindergartens are also projected.

Work continues on the projected sports centre near Ramot Ramat and on the ex-servicemen's centre and memorial on the French Carmel, a gift from friends in the U.S. The city theatre building is to be overhauled and work will soon start on students' dormitories at the Technion Medical School, the western wing of the Rothschild Hospital and an expansion of the chronic diseases hospital at Ramot Ramat.

"We're making a major effort to keep the city clean with the help of labour brought in from out of town," Mayor Zeisel said (complaints on the decline of cleanliness have multiplied recently). Many streets are being re-surfaced, public benches are being put up, street lighting is being improved, and the sewage purification plant will be expanded to double its capacity.

JDL man jailed on arms charge

NEW YORK (UPI). — A young Jewish Defence League member was sentenced to five months in jail yesterday for using false names to obtain rifles for the JDL camp in Sullivan County, New York State.

In imposing the sentence on Stuart Cohen, 20, Manhattan Federal Judge David Bonas said: "We can't survive as a country if people take the law into their own hands, for whatever reasons."

TRAIN BOMBER SOUGHT

PARIS (AP). — Police intensified their dragnet yesterday for France's mysterious train bomber, who has demanded $400,000 to call off his attacks on the state-owned railway system.

He has already blown up a section of track barely three minutes before a train was to have passed over the spot. That was apparently just a warning.

He had written to authorities in advance that he would set off a bomb on a four-mile stretch of track 120 miles southeast of Paris. Despite patrols that passed the spot 20 times, the bomb still went off last Wednesday just as the train was coming out of a tunnel, around a blind curve from that spot.

Police managed to stop the train in time. It was carrying only five passengers on a secondary local line.

In another letter, posted to the headquarters of the railway authority, the bomber threatened to blow up the Saint Lazare station, the busiest in the country, in the heart of Paris.

In the latest letter, received yesterday morning, the bomber upped his extortion fee to $400,000 and repeated a request that it be paid in French and German currency.

"But he hasn't told us how he wants it," said a spokesman for the state railways. "He just said he wants more money and he didn't even repeat his previous threats."

Police attack as 15,000 march in Uruguay

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay. — Hundreds of demonstrators were arrested and scores injured as police attacked 15,000 marchers protesting against the dictatorship in Uruguay.

Leaders of the outlawed labour unions ordered a step-up in the general strike that has nearly paralyzed the country since President Juan M. Bordaberry dissolved Congress two weeks ago and began ruling by decree.

The march on the Presidential Palace Monday night was the largest anti-Government demonstration so far. The marchers sang the national anthem and repeated the phrase "tyrants tremble."

The police attacked the marchers on 18th of July Avenue near the palace, and the fighting raged more than two hours. The police fired tear gas grenades, then moved in with baton clubs. Mounted officers joined in, using the flat side of their sabres.

Younger demonstrators tried to throw up barricades, but they were overwhelmed.

Earlier in the day, a 16-year-old youth was shot and killed by a military patrol. Officials said he was in a group of youths that fired on a policeman, but his friends said he was painting an anti-Government slogan on a wall. A 28-year-old Communist teacher was shot fatally Friday as he was throwing rocks at a bus during the general strike.

The call for intensification of the strike apparently was aimed particularly at public transportation, which had been returning to normal.

LEADER ARRESTED

Meanwhile, Uruguay's Broad Front Coalition leader — retired army General Llober Seregni — was under arrest yesterday after taking part in the violent demonstration.

The 54-year-old leftwing leader was snatched from the house of a military friend Monday night by members of the armed forces, according to his family. Seregni had earlier signed a document asking his followers to resist the military-backed coup of President Bordaberry.

The Broad Front Coalition polled 320,000 votes in the 1971 election when General Seregni stood against Bordaberry.

In one of several bulletins last night, the Government said that the Communist newspaper "El Popular" was occupied by troops during the clash with demonstrators.

$400m. wreck said found

KEY WEST, Florida (AP). — A team of treasure hunters says it has found a wreck believed to be the Nuestra Señora de Atotcha, a 350-year-old galleon which carried an estimated $400m. in gold and silver.

U.S. warned on M.E. arms sale

NEW YORK (UPI). — In yesterday's editorial entitled "Invitation to trouble," the "New York Times" said that "the dangers which accompany Administration efforts to boost U.S. arms sales abroad are nowhere more obvious and grave than in the Middle East, where oil-rich states have become a prime target for American military merchants."

"This trouble is," as it has been amply demonstrated by experience in South Asia, that once American weapons have been transferred to another country, there is no way of ensuring they will be used or not used — in a manner compatible with American interests... "Even without the destabilizing effects of the Arab-Israeli dispute, there is more than enough conflict and potential conflict within and among the Arab states."

WASHINGTON (INA). — The International Development Association (IDA), a World Bank affiliate, on Monday made its first loan — $15m. — to Egypt for its industrial development.

ALLEGATIONS ON MOZAMBIQUE:

'Genocide of African villagers'

LONDON. — The Portuguese military in Mozambique are carrying out a policy of systematic genocide of African villagers "rivalling that of My Lai in Vietnam," according to a report in yesterday's "Times".

The Portuguese government immediately denied the reports of the massacre, adding that neither the village nor the river mentioned in "The Times" could be found in Mozambique maps.

"The Times" report raised a storm in London, where Portuguese Prime Minister Dr. Marcello Caetano is due on an official visit next week. Opposition leader Harold Wilson called on Prime Minister Edward Heath to cancel Dr. Caetano's visit, saying the reported events had no parallel in genocide since the Nazi massacres. The Labour party announced it would boycott all public events planned in connection with Dr. Caetano's visit.

The article, written by a Roman Catholic priest, Father Adrian Hastings of the College of the Ascension, Birmingham — was based, he said, on reports received from Spanish missionaries working in Mozambique.

"Faced with the growth of guerrilla activity, the Portuguese forces have grown ever more brutal, carrying out the systematic genocide of people in villages," he wrote.

Father Adrian said there was a whole series of such massacres in the Mucumbura area between May and November, 1971, "for guerrillas each rivalling that of My Lai in Vietnam."

He said the latest known massacre occurred in the village of Wiriyamu last December 16 when more than 400 men, women and children were shot, kicked, burned or beaten to death.

He called "the full account of the Wiriyamu massacre, carefully and secretly compiled by missionaries in the area." This report gave the names of 88 persons shot and also detailed killings of small children by dashing their heads on the ground and other murders.

In an editorial commenting on the alleged massacre, "The Times" said there was "little doubt of the substantial accuracy of the report." (UPI, Reuters)

'A NEW GENERATION OF IRA'

Vehicles ablaze in Belfast

BELFAST (UPI). — Groups of Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) youths set fire to private cars and trucks after burning eight buses on Monday, an army spokesman said yesterday.

Young IRA supporters previously had been used mainly to create diversions to draw the attention of security forces from the activities of IRA gunmen, army sources said.

The highly organized waves of arson in the past few days may be the first operations of a new generation of young IRA men who are flexing their muscles for a summer of violence, an army source said.

A woman died Monday from burns received when the IRA made similar attacks on buses last Wednesday, an army spokesman said. She is the 54th person to die in almost four years of violence among Northern Ireland's majority Protestants, minority Roman Catholics and security forces.

Six of the buses burned Monday were set alight in Belfast's Catholic districts.

Although the buses were set alight in areas as much as 11 km. apart, the action all took place within 15 minutes, indicating they were coordinated, army sources said. When buses were withdrawn from service, groups of IRA youths roamed one area setting fire to private cars and trucks. A gunman shot and slightly wounded a British soldier, the army said.

"Army successes in rounding up senior IRA men has left it open for youngsters to try and make a name for themselves," army sources said. "High on our list of wanted killers at the moment are a 14-year-old boy and a 15-year-old girl."

"They left their fingerprints on the tape which was used to put together a 27 kg. bomb detonated by remote control in a derelict building in the Falls Road area."

A patrol was fired to the building and the bomb detonated, the army source said, killing two soldiers.

20 die in Mexican bus disaster

COLUMA, Mexico (AP). — Twenty persons were killed and at least five seriously injured in a bus accident on the Colima-Jalisco state border about 32 kms. east of here Monday, the Mexican Red Cross reported yesterday.

A Red Cross spokesman said the bus ran into a bridge and then plunged 20 metres into a ravine.

Evidence of orgy in payola trial

LONDON (Reuters). — Two men in the broadcasting business were treated to a 24-hour sex orgy by a pusher of pop records, a court was told yesterday.

A trustee identified as "Miss B" testified that she and five other girls took turns performing lesbian acts and having intercourse with one of the men.

Watching it all, the brunette said, was singer Jackie Jones, 34, who is accused of offering sex bribes to promote broadcasting time for pop records.

"Miss B" said the orgy took place in one of London's most expensive hotels, "The Inn on the Park."

It was one of several such parties she attended for the benefit of meeting people "connected with the B.B.C. (British Broadcasting Corporation)."

Describing the scene, "Miss B" said: "Jackie was egging us on to get on the bed and perform lesbian acts and have intercourse with one of the men."

"Did that occur?" asked prosecutor Stephen Mitchell.

"Yes," said "Miss B." "Jackie remained throughout."

Jackie Jones also charged with attempting to influence witnesses controlling prostitutes and soliciting a man to murder her former husband, songwriter John Christian-Dee. Christian-Dee is charged with attempting to pervert the course of justice. Accused with them on an associated charge is Eric Gilbert, a 42-year-old former court official who became infatuated with Jones.

"Miss B" said "Miss B" testified into her sex sessions was witnessed by Jackie Jones promising that it would help her get a job on television. "But I stopped believing her stories because they were too far-fetched," "Miss B" said.

Her usual payment was £5 (US$1) a time. For a client, "Miss B" told the court, she had to dress up as a 12-year-old girl with flat shoes. "Jackie Jones told me to put on a squeaky voice," she said.

Describing Gilbert's role, "Miss B" said: "He used to make tea and look after the house."

On one occasion, Jackie Jones made her have sexual intercourse with Gilbert. "She made me promise not to tell anyone about it," "Miss B" said.

Guerrillas 'deep in Rhodesia'

LUSAKA (UPI). — The front for the Liberation of Zimbabwe (FROLI), one of three Zimbabwe-based Rhodesian liberation movements, said yesterday its guerrillas were operating "deep inside" Rhodesia.

In a journal called "Zimbabwe Lines," FROLI claimed it had "extensive machinery" in Rhodesia conducting an underground liberation struggle and it attributed to FROLI forces more than 20 incidents in Rhodesia this year.

They included an attack in February on a police station in the Karoi area, in which one soldier was killed and five other persons wounded.

BLACK SEPTEMBER TRIAL OPENS IN FRANCE TODAY

By JACK MAURICE
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

PARIS. — Secret servicemen from half-a-dozen countries, including South Africa and Israel, will attend today's opening of the trial of two self-confessed Black September terrorists.

The trial is taking place in the southern French town of Gap, where two Arabs, Habib Sakhr, 25, and Mohamed Omar, 29, on a charge of trying to smuggle 16 kg. of explosives into France to blow up the Jordan embassy in Paris.

Details are expected to emerge about Dr. Diane Lefevre, the Rhodesia-born Cape Town University medical graduate, deported from France last March, and her complicity with the Black September leader in Europe, Mohammed Boudia, who was assassinated on June 28 in his booby-trapped car in a Paris street.

The two Arabs were arrested on March 15 when their German-registered Mercedes-Benz was stopped by customs at the frontier station at Menton. They had a list of 12 people to contact in Paris — Dr. Lefevre and Boudia were two of them.

The two accused have revealed many details of their movement, and the French authorities, fearing they might be assassinated, transferred them from prison in Gap to security cells in Marseilles central jail.

Mohamed Omar, father of four children, tried to commit suicide two weeks ago, but has recovered sufficiently to stand trial. Three lawyers — Gilbert Collard, Rene Blanchot and Daniel Bordes — will take the line: "this must not be a political trial against Black September. We are defending the rights of desperate men who have acted desperately."

Both men have issued a joint statement saying: "We are soldiers and not terrorists. We are amazed that French justice should interfere in a matter which only concerns the Palestinians, Israelis and the Jordanians. We are in prison while King Hussein remains a free man."

Neither man speaks a word of French.

They face a jail term ranging from one to five years for breaking a 1939 law on illegal handling of explosives.

South African security men will want to learn from the evidence the real importance of Dr. Lefevre to Black September — clearly much more important than suspected earlier — and whether her presence with the movement means a link-up with the banned African National Congress (A.N.C.) movement. The Israelis will want to hear details of where the accused were trained and how.

Judging from "leaks," the two men have "squatted" on a big scale, admitting they trained at Dimak in Syria where they were given $500 and a Mercedes-Benz in February to deliver explosives in Paris to Dr. Lefevre and her Palestinian accomplice known as David Cross.

Top security measures will be taken in the court, which will be heavily guarded by police.

Brezhnev and Kaunda urge withdrawal

MOSCOW. — Soviet Party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev yesterday reaffirmed Soviet support for the Arab cause in the Middle East and called for an Israeli withdrawal. He was addressing a Kremlin luncheon honoring North Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong and Party Leader Le Duan.

In Lusaka, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda on Monday called on Israel to vacate Arab lands held since the Six Day War. He likened the Middle East problem to that of white minority rule in Southern Africa. He was speaking at a farewell meeting with outgoing Egyptian Ambassador Gamal Nanguh.

'Arabs could exploit Japan oil need'

CAIRO (AP). — Japan's urgent need for oil and new markets could be used by the Arabs to push Tokyo towards an active Middle East posture, "Al-Ahram" newspaper said yesterday.

It said a meeting of Japan's ambassadors in the Middle East currently being held in Tokyo should be watched carefully by the Arabs because of U.S. attempts to establish a consortium of oil-consuming countries.

Japan's refusal to join could be swept aside if all the countries of Europe agreed to the idea and the "Arabs should support the Japanese stand by a policy which could draw Tokyo nearer to the Middle East politically and economically," the paper said.

"Al-Ahram" said the Arab volume of trade with Japan was 50 times bigger than her trade with Israel, "thus Japan although away geographically is very near to the Arabs politically and economically."

Syria greets new Beirut Premier

DAMASCUS (UPI). — The Syrian government wished Lebanon's new Premier and government "success in their mission" yesterday, Damascus radio reported.

The gesture raised hopes that Syria may shortly reopen its land borders with Lebanon, which it closed on May 8, at the height of the clashes between the Lebanese army and Palestinian terrorists.

The broadcast said Syrian Premier Mahmoud el-Ayyoubi telephoned new Lebanese Premier Taki Eddin Solh yesterday morning and wished Solh and his cabinet "success in their mission in the service of the brotherly Lebanese people and the service of the Arab cause."

Meanwhile, Soviet Politburo member Andrei Kirilenko met Lebanese President Suleiman Franjeh at the presidential palace yesterday, government sources said.

Kirilenko, who is also a secretary of the Soviet Communist party central committee, arrived from Damascus on Monday.

'200 Indians drown as launch capsizes'

DACCA (Reuters). — About 200 people are feared to have drowned when an overloaded motor launch capsized on Monday night in the Jamuna estuary near the Bangladesh coastal district of Barisal, officials said.

However, a launch company spokesman in Dacca claimed all the passengers were safe.

Police later arrested two of the launch's crewmen.

Bhutto wins vote on Bangladesh

ISLAMABAD (Reuters). — Pakistan President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto won a mandate from the National Assembly early yesterday to recognize Bangladesh — but he made it clear he would not act until Pakistani prisoners of war were released.

The vote was taken at 1:30 a.m. local time yesterday after a long and bitter debate in which President Bhutto accused opposition members who "walked out of the assembly of being anti-Pakistan."

U.K. rule ends in Bahamas

NASSAU (Reuters). — The Union Jack was lowered for the last time over the Bahamas yesterday as the archipelago of 3,000 islands and rocks became independent after three centuries of British colonial rule.

Queen Elizabeth's representative, Prince Charles, handed over the constitutional instruments of the Bahamas Government to its first black Premier, Lynden O. Pindling.

A sun canopy, cranked down on Prince Charles and leading dignitaries at the ceremony just as Prime Minister Pindling received the documents. The Prince was unhurt and reacted with a huge laugh.

Mr. Pindling said last weekend that a secessionist threat from Abaco, the second largest island, was dead. But the island's white population needed "a little while" to overcome their reservations about leaving the protection of Britain.

He also made it clear that the country's immigration policy, which covers the issuing of work permits to foreigners, would be directed at placing Bahamians in top positions.

Call for Pankow reparations

GENEVA (UPI). — World Jewish leaders called on East Germany to follow West Germany in paying compensation to victims of Nazi persecution.

The leaders of 22 Jewish organizations, meeting at the conference on Jewish material claims against Germany, said East Germany, just as West Germany, should make amends for Nazi atrocities.

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the conference, said East Germany "should accept in principle the obligation to assume their appropriate share of the indemnity."

ISRAEL NOTE TO U.N. 'Terror threatens peace'

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters). — Israel said on Monday that any group of terrorists had the power "to generate a threat to global peace."

In a lengthy memorandum addressed to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and published in documentation for next week's opening of debate here on the terrorism problem, the Israeli Government said: "The violent acts of the Arab terrorist groups, however styled, are acts constituting criminal offenses and are punishable in accordance with the laws applicable to crimes."

"The members of the Arab terrorist groups do not belong to any of the categories of persons mentioned in the Third Geneva Convention relative to the treatment of prisoners of war of August 12, 1949. Consequently, Israeli courts and tribunals have consistently dismissed the contention that members of the groups arrested are entitled to the status of prisoners of war.

"The groups are neither belligerents, nor entitled to claim any of the rights of belligerents."

The Israeli note went on: "Terrorism is directed against the very existence of states, the activity of heads of state or of central organs of states, their representatives or basic public services. That being so, any terrorist act impinges upon the right of a state to self-preservation, and the states' measures of repression of the categories of persons mentioned in the Third Geneva Con-

Allon denial on 'Arafat message'

Jerusalem Post Reporter

A spokesman from Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon's office yesterday denied a Beirut report that Mr. Allon had sent a message to Patah leader Yasser Arafat indicating his willingness to meet with him.

According to Agency France Presse, the Beirut weekly "al-Ushba al-Arabi" quoted Greek Composer Mikis Theodorakis as saying he had visited Arafat recently following his concert tour in Israel last March. Theodorakis reportedly said he carried a message from Mr. Allon to the terrorist leader that he was "ready to meet with you anytime you say," the paper wrote.

Arafat is said to have replied to Theodorakis that this was not the first time the Israeli leader had sent him "greetings." He rejected the offer to meet, saying it was a " Zionist trick," the paper said. He asked Theodorakis: "Why should I want to meet with him when he refuses to recognize the existence of the Palestine nation?"

Terror trial starts today in Nicosia

NICOSIA (AP). — Seven young Arab terrorists go on trial before the local assize court here today, on charges of blowing up the Israeli ambassador's residence in Nicosia and attempting to blow up an Israeli airliner at Nicosia Airport last April 9.

One Arab was killed and a Cypriot policeman was wounded in gunbattles that developed during the attacks. The trial is expected to last several days.

Nixon fights move to cut troops in Europe

WASHINGTON (AP). — President Nixon's government prepared its big guns yesterday to do battle with a coalition in Congress urging a reduction of U.S. armed forces stationed in Western Europe.

The confrontation takes place before the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee in public sessions, and began yesterday.

The White House's message on the troop reduction issue is being presented to the committee by a high-powered group of officials who also will be speaking indirectly to the nations of West Europe and to the American public.

They include the new Secretary of Defense, James Schlesinger, Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Rush; Admiral Thomas Moore, the chairman of the U.S. joint chiefs of staff; General Andrew Goodpaster, the Supreme Allied Commander in Europe; U.S. Ambassador to NATO Donald Rumsfeld, and Under-Secretary of State for Economic Affairs William Casey.

Kenneth Rush, the lead-off witness at the three-day hearings, told Congress yesterday the promise of mutual U.S.-Soviet troop cutbacks in Europe "would be destroyed" by Congressional proposals for the U.S. to reduce unilaterally its forces stationed on the continent.

Equally important, Rush said, a one-sided U.S. troop withdrawal would undercut efforts to gain more burden-sharing, trade and monetary arrangements with its Western European allies.

By "burden-sharing," Rush was referring to financial contributions by European member nations of the Atlantic Alliance to help offset the cost of maintaining 310,000 U.S. troops in Western Europe, principally in West Germany.

Rush said that although he cannot predict how successful the U.S.-Soviet talks starting on October 30 on the mutual reduction of East-West forces will be, the success of U.S.-Soviet arms reductions talks holds out a promise for troop reductions.

"These extraordinarily important negotiations cannot succeed, nor can they proceed if the U.S. undercuts them with unilateral troop reductions," Rush said.

Freed Peace Corps group in Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP). — More than 100 members of the U.S. Peace Corps rested yesterday in the capital Zaire after being held for 51 hours in Uganda.

The 111 Americans arrived here on Monday night after President Mobutu Sese Seko vouched for them and Uganda's President Idi Amin let them go. Amin said he thought they might be mercenaries on their way to fight in Burundi's tribal war or Israel agents.

After an uncomfortable Saturday night in the Katanga, Uganda, air terminal, the 48 young women and 63 young men spent the rest of their detention in a hotel beside Lake Victoria.

A U.S. embassy spokesman in Kinshasa said they all appeared to be "in good health and spirits."

THE WINNING PLAY

Tannah Hirsch of the United States, formerly the bridge editor of The Jerusalem Post who is currently visiting Israel, had a difficult double dummy problem. As you look at all four hands in today's deal, you will probably not find it easy to decide how to set South's 3 NT contract, but Tannah actually found the winning play in the heat of battle against a top level United States pair.

♥ K Q J 10
♦ A K J
♣ A K J

The bidding:
West North East South
P 1 ♠ P 2 NT
P 3 NT All Pass

A low ♠ was led and won by South with the 10. Declarer saw that 3 NT was easy if the spades split 3-3. So he played two top spades and led to the ♠ K. He was disappointed when the ♠ Ace did not drop the two outstanding spades. On the ♠ Ace and another ♠ lead both East and South discarded hearts. Here was the layout for the last seven tricks:

Variation A: The lead of a low ♠. Declarer could win this trick with the J, win a ♠ in dummy, play the high ♠ on which he could discard the ♠ K. West would be squeezed and declarer could make a ♠ or a ♠ for his contract.

Variation B: Lead of a low ♠. If the ♠ is covered by the 8 and J the declarer could then win a ♠ in dummy and on the ♠ discard a ♠. West would be squeezed and could win only the ♠ A and the ♠ Q and ♠.

Variation C: The lead of a low ♠. If the ♠ is allowed to hold the trick we could have the same development as in variation B.

Variation D: Lead of a ♠. The ♠ is led from dummy with South discarding a ♠ and West is squeezed. A low ♠ would be led to the J and Ace and declarer could not be prevented from winning a ♠ and a red K.

The winning variation was the lead of the ♠ Ace. The dummy was then thrown in with a ♠. If the ♠ were led South had no safe discard. With the lead of a ♠ in place of a ♠ West won and threw in South with a ♠. South had to lose an additional two ♠ tricks.

I nominate this deal as the "Hand of the Year."

Kazablan — a crowded canvas

YEHORAM GAON IN KAZABLAN

Kazablan (Cinema and Rod, Tel Aviv; Eden, Jerusalem; Atsmon Haifa; Hader and Rama, Ramat Gan, and elsewhere in the country) is Israel's first block-buster, a large-scale musical set in Jaffa in the "Sound of Music" and "Fiddler on the Roof" convention. It is billed as having 1,000 dancers and singers and was filmed in Panavision with stereophonic sound.

With this picture, producer-director Menahem Golan has stepped into a field that is generally regarded as being Hollywood property and in many ways he is to be congratulated on the job he has done which must have presented enormous technical difficulties. The film is full of color and movement — he keeps the flow of energy going all the time. And while too many disparate elements are mixed and one has the feeling that he wanted to crowd too many aspects of Israel onto the one canvas, and at times the debt to "West Side Story" and "Fiddler" is too obvious, the result is lively and entertaining. Personally I could have done with less of "we're all Jews together and hearts of gold beat beneath our various exteriors." Dov Seltzer's music is very pleasant and the songs sound well in Yehoram Gaon's agreeable voice while the dancing (choreographer: Shimon Baram) is spirited and the color photography (David Gurzhel) first-rate.

Most readers will probably know at least the outline of the story of "Kazablan," written by Yigal Mossinson, which was first a play and then a stage musical which ran for some 800 performances with Yehoram Gaon in the title role, which he also plays in the film (screenplay by Menahem Golan and Haim Hader). Enough to say that basically the story concerns the relationship between the immigrants from North Africa and those from Europe, living in the slum area of Jaffa. Kazablan, sometime hero of the Six Day War, is six years later head of a band of hoodlums, exemplifying his community's feelings of bitterness and frustration. He is in love with the "educated" daughter of Polish parents. But as this is a musical, one can be sure that all will end well and, really, one must look upon the film as a spectacular rather than a study in inter-community relations.

Unusual for a film of today there is no sex. True, Kazablan is in love with Rachel (Eilat Lavi, who makes the impression of a very nice, good-looking girl) but I think he only places a chaste kiss on her cheek. Personally, I found this refreshing.

Yehuda Efroni is adequate as Mr. Feldman, Rachel's father, and there is a very good performance from Yosef Gruber as Mr. Yehoshua, a former shoe-store owner who is in love with Rachel. Yehoram Gaon suits his part perfectly and immigrants from North Africa and those from Europe, living in the slum area of Jaffa. Kazablan, sometime hero of the Six Day War, is six years later head of a band of hoodlums, exemplifying his community's feelings of bitterness and frustration. ## THE FIRST MACCABIAH

Diary of a tearful netball player

By GERTRUDE MILLER

ATHLETIC performance is undoubtedly on a higher standard, and all the arrangements more professional, at the current Ninth Maccabiah than they were at the by now almost legendary first gathering of Jewish sportsmen and women in Tel Aviv in the spring of 1932. But for those of us who were there, in the days of our youth, no other Maccabiah will ever be able to measure up to it.

For most of us, it was our first contact with Great Israel — land of our forefathers and the godlike halutzim we revered. It was also, in many cases, our first meeting with Jews from countries other than the one where we had been born. In fact, not all the British team were really athletes, but all of us were members of Bar Cochba, the first all-Jewish sports club which was the forerunner of today's British Maccabiah, and we had joined the contingent as much — or more — to visit Palestine as to take part in the sports meet.

We travelled by ship from Tilbury to Port Said, aboard one of the old "O" vessels of the P & O Line, which linked England with its Indian Empire. During the voyage we tried to keep limber and when we called at Malta, some of us hired bicycles and cycled round Valletta to get our muscles into trim, much to the amusement of the Maltese.

"A sight so splendid and so beautiful that it brought tears to our eyes" — massed drill at the closing ceremony.

From Port Said we crossed the Suez Canal by ferry to Kantara where we took the train for Tel Aviv. By pure coincidence, I have just come across the diary I kept of this first visit to Palestine and it tells me that as we crossed the Canal, we sang "When the Lord turned the captivity of Zion" and that when we came to the other side, "the air seemed cleaner."

First Hebrew

We slept fitfully from Kantara and woke at first light to find ourselves in Gaza, "the first Hebrew station," according to my diary. It was there that we saw our first Hebrew signs — "Nashim" and "Gvarim" (women and men) on two adjoining benches, and the emotional mood being highly charged, we apparently went on reading them. We crowded to the windows of the train and, my diary notes, "sang Hatikva with more emotion and less music than ever heard before and kissed each other in a moment of passionate feeling."

We arrived in Tel Aviv, which was at first sight disappointing, just in time to shower and change into our all-white uniforms to join the parade for the official opening of the games. "It was thrilling," I wrote, "to meet hundreds of men and girls from other countries all dressed in variations on the blue-white colours of the Zionist flag. What splendid fellows the Germans are, how elegant the Austrians, how stately the Poles!"

We marched through the streets of Tel Aviv, faces aglow with heat, hearts aglow with excitement, to the stadium at the still unbuilt-up northern end of Tel Aviv (we returned via Dizengoff Street, which had been specially built for the Maccabiah). "The whole population of Tel Aviv turned out to welcome us. The Union Jack was cheered and our contingent marched extremely well." Our flag-bearer, incidentally, was a handsome young girl who is today a Jerusalem grandmother.

Not all the athletic feats of the English teams can be recalled with equal pride. I still find myself blushing with shame when I remember the netball match played against a Palestinian team in Petah Tikva. Our seven girls walked out on to the field to play the ladylike netball we had learned at the prep schools some of us were still attending, and found ourselves facing a team of five. It was only then that we discovered to our horror that we were supposed to be playing a game called basketball, about which we knew nothing at all. We were beaten by something like 85 to three — a score unheard of in netball history. But who cared? We were young, it was spring and we were in Palestine. Nothing, not even the most ignominious of defeats, could dampen our euphoria.

Massed drill

After the concluding ceremony of the Maccabiah, with a display of massed drill by the Palestinians ("a sight so splendid and so beautiful that it brought tears to our eyes"), we marched past the High Commissioner and back to the old Herzliya Gymnasium, "to the music of the band of the Bulgarian contingent and our own singing." There in the courtyard, we were addressed by the Gymnasium headmaster, Dr. Moshe Shai (looking exactly like Theodore Herzl) and Sephardi Chofet Rabbi Uriel who, my diary notes, "looked like a prophet in his picturesque purple robes and turban." But the most exciting moment was when the President of World Maccabiah spoke and the Syrian contingent led the cry "Am Yisrael Hab" and we all joined in.

"Two thousand lusty voices," I recorded, "testified to the new vigour of an old people and then spontaneously we began to dance the hora. I had a Syrian on one side and a German on the other. We danced as few people have ever danced and when we marched back to our hotels we could have marched all night."

Looking back 40 years, it seems to have been very heaven to be young and in love with everything and everyone. After presenting a letter from the Lord Mayor of London to the Mayor of Tel Aviv, Meir Dizengoff, who regaled us "with a cup of excellent Turkish coffee and a very good Palestinian cigarette" (was I already smoking at that age?), the British contingent went on tour.

I hope the participants in the Ninth Maccabiah will see as much of Israel as we did of Palestine, though I doubt whether they can even begin to imagine how uncomfortable the buses were. We bathed in the Dead Sea and the Sea of Galilee; we went to Tel Hai and to Degania (where Baratz told us about the early days and impressed me considerably, so my diary recalls, with his lined face and youthful, kind eyes); we saw the Einberg electricity plant at Tel Or on the Jordan; we met the settlers of Ein Harod ("some of them seem to have very communist ideas"); we went to the Western Wall and to the University on Mount Scopus; we had lunch with Avraham Shapira, of Hachomer Kame, in Petah Tikva; and visited Greidinger's model farm at Kalkaniya. Everything was wonderful, except Afula and the toilet facilities everywhere.

In Tel Aviv, some of us went to see Ohel perform "Yakov and Rachel"; and some of us heard Bialik recite Hadassah at the end of the Oneg Shabbat gathering. Of that first Shabbat in Tel Aviv, I find that I wrote: "All one hears is the soft padding of the camels and the continual shuffling of thousands of feet along the streets."

All through that tour we gazed in admiring wonder at the tanned, muscular Palestinians and some of the girls learned their first two words of the then current basic Hebrew — Beit yodoyim ("hands off") which one doesn't seem to hear any more, or perhaps just not at my age. Judging from my diary, we wept so much from overwhelming emotion that we must have served as an extra trigonometry project. But by the end of our visit more than a few of us knew that Eretz Israel was where we would one day make our homes. We did not need to take an oath not to forget Jerusalem: it had engraved itself on our hearts. Some of us did come back to settle — without benefit of duty-free imports.

This week I shall be watching first-class athletic performances on television and there will be no netball matches to remind me of that shaming defeat in Petah Tikva. I am sure that many of the sportsmen will feel about their first visit to Israel as we felt about ours to Palestine. My comrades of the first Maccabiah and I have grown old and grey, though less fearful than we were then, but I hope that for the young people of the Ninth Maccabiah the country will be enveloped, as it was for us, in the same romantic glow and that they will feel, as we did, that they have come home.

IS THERE A FUTURE FOR JEWS IN RUSSIA?

Russian immigrants and Israeli Jews who want to stay in Russia, and deep-rooted anti-Jewish feeling emerged as the result.

The same applies to national tensions. The Jews have played an important role as Russifiers among the non-Russian nationalities of the U.S.S.R. But now the nationalities want the Jews to define themselves as such and not to strengthen Russian influence among them. There are also pressures from the smaller nationalities to increase their own representation in government, science, the press, etc. and the easiest scapegoats to be sacrificed to make way for them are the Jews.

Another factor pushing Russian Jews to identification with Israel and Judaism is the utter failure of the entire official ideology. Disillusionment is rife both with the ideology and with the harbingers of liberty which appeared in the mid-1950s but have been suppressed. The Jewish nationalist movement has provided the main avenue of search for the Jews.

Prof. Ettinger notes that the Soviet government's policy is assimilation of all smaller nationalities, projecting Russian language and culture wherever possible at the expense of their language and culture. The Jews are not the only victims of cultural discrimination in the U.S.S.R.

The rulers of the Soviet Union nurtured Yiddish culture and art when they thought this was in their own interests. But they regarded Yiddish as a temporary expedient until such time as the Jews would assimilate into Russian culture, within its new socialist framework, which, initially, most Russian Jews wanted. The process was restrained by the lack of brotherhood in practice and by the cruelty of the Soviet dictatorship and later under the impact of the Kibbutz.

Professor Ettinger also notes that the assimilationist tendency of Soviet Jewry differs only in its tragic circumstances, but not in its impetus or cultural results, from the assimilation in the Western World.

Snowballing

In the last few years, Soviet Jewish nationalism has entered a snowballing revival and emigration is considerable. But this is far from saying that the Soviet Jewish community is on the verge of disintegration. Many of the activists are followers of Heral and Jabotinsky, sharing a "catastrophic" theory of Jewish history. But the situation today is unique and historical precedents do not hold. We cannot even estimate the number of Jews in Russia. The census spoke of over two million, but certain circumstances may bring part-Jews or non-Jews married to Jews to be considered or to define themselves as Jews, in which case the figures will grow considerably. A reverse process is also a possibility. Immigration to Israel is not going to make a big dent for a long while. If we talk of an emigration of 35,000 a year, this must be balanced against an estimated natural increase of 20,000 the year, so the difference in the absolute number is comparatively small.

It was the change in the political climate which made possible the renewed nationalist activity. It was the easing of conditions in Russia that thrust into the open the question of relations between the Jews and the non-Jewish environment. With the end of the Stalinist terror, all sorts of differences and tensions rose to the surface. Friction increased between white collar workers and manual labourers.

Eighty per cent of Jewish bread-winners are in the former category and deep-rooted anti-Jewish feeling emerged as the result.

The same applies to national tensions. The Jews have played an important role as Russifiers among the non-Russian nationalities of the U.S.S.R. But now the nationalities want the Jews to define themselves as such and not to strengthen Russian influence among them. There are also pressures from the smaller nationalities to increase their own representation in government, science, the press, etc. and the easiest scapegoats to be sacrificed to make way for them are the Jews.

Another factor pushing Russian Jews to identification with Israel and Judaism is the utter failure of the entire official ideology. Disillusionment is rife both with the ideology and with the harbingers of liberty which appeared in the mid-1950s but have been suppressed. The Jewish nationalist movement has provided the main avenue of search for the Jews.

Jewish identity

Ettinger opposes the slogan "let the emigrants emigrate and the rest assimilate." Even aliya will dwindle if Russian Jewry is left stranded in a cultural wilderness. However, general assimilation is not likely, since Russia makes assimilation impossible. The Jews who remain will have to come to terms with their Jewish identity. "It is a human and national obligation to provide spiritual and cultural nourishment to people such as these. We cannot forget them nor consider them lost," writes Ettinger.

Looking for expressions of Jewish national culture in the U.S.S.R. today he finds it in the living entity of the synagogue, in "underground" poetry and in veiled forms of permitted literature. This culture is repressed but alive. Any expression of Jewish culture will be, like everything else in the country, limited and controlled by the government — "yet it will put forth some shoots of its own."

Trying to foretell the nature of the incipient Soviet Jewish culture, Ettinger does not anticipate under prevailing conditions an original creation of substance. Russian Jews are being sustained with whatever reaches them accidentally — the quality is irrelevant as long as it conveys a sense of belonging and familiarity. In the final analysis the question will be whether the State of Israel will have sufficient spiritual influence on Russian Jewry.

THIS weekly column has been appearing for just 13 years and has reported on almost every Jewish community in the world. But one on which no information has been received during this time is Albania.

A reference to this community is made in a letter to the "Jewish Chronicle" complaining that while many demonstrations and interventions are made for Jews in Eastern Europe and Arab countries, nobody shows the slightest interest in the 350 Jews still living in Albania. Historically there are many references to Jews in this part of the world and in 1935 the U.S. Ambassador to Albania succeeded in securing permission for Jews from Germany to settle there and over 100 were admitted before King Zog fled the country in 1939.

The letter states that there are four Jewish communities in Albania — in Tirana, Valona, Durres and Shkoder. No Jewish institutions exist (until the mid-1950s there was some contact with the Joint which sent supplies of matzot each Passover). The letter suggests representations to Albania and China to secure the aliya of Albanian Jewry and adds that the matter is urgent.

WOMEN'S ADVOCATE

MOETZET Hapo'lot, the Women Workers' Council, was established more than 50 years ago, and for all but the first eight of these years Berta Idelson has been its Secretary and guiding spirit.

Prior to a celebration of the 25th anniversary of the state last night, Mrs. Idelson announced her decision to resign and to hand over to the next generation. She does so at a time when women's place in society has once more come to the fore, and it is surprising how little Mrs. Idelson, 77 or not, has to learn from the younger generation. Indeed, they might learn from what she brought with her in this respect from a Russian university in 1926. She was exiled for Zionism: nothing is altogether new under the sun.

She spent many years in the Knesset, where she helped to get women's right to equal pay written into the law, if not necessarily into the economic system.

But in Moetzet Hapo'lot she was not so much concerned with the rights of women as with the search for the best framework within which they might make their own contribution to society most effectively. She has always asserted that there are some fields in which women can make a more valuable contribution in a separate organization where they can make their own decisions and need not wait for the men to approve their target.

Her targets were to be sought in three areas, but even these, on a closer look, are found to stem from the same basic point of view. Within the organization, one of her first aims was to secure for Oriental women the same status and the same opportunities as their western, usually more educated, sisters enjoyed. She applied the same yardstick to Arab women, and was instrumental in getting village organizations started and making the Arab women of this country aware of the advantages of education for their daughters as well as sons, and of their rights as individuals.

From the thirties, when the wave of immigration from Germany began, Mrs. Idelson was concerned for the needs of immigrant families and studied the best and quickest road to their integration. Even now her studies in this field are not ended, for in the 43 years during which she has headed the working women's organization immigration continued to produce its quota of individual problems. It is in some way curious that while her words and thought were almost always concerned with the working woman, it was the housewives of Israel who became her real constituency. She believes that most women should go out to work whether they have a family or not, in order to play their part in the world around them. Their families will be the better off for not being too much pampered and catered to, she believes, and also that there is social benefit for all concerned in the contacts established when immigrant women spend some hours a day helping out in the families of other women employed outside their homes.

It is hardly to be supposed that Mrs. Idelson will retire completely from public work, but she would surely have earned retirement.

WHAT'S A JEW — OXFORD STYLE

LONDON. — The holiest of lexicographical holies has withstood the onslaught. The Oxford English Dictionary will not be changing its definition of "Jew." It will not even note in brackets its less savoury definitions are "offensive."

Jewish organizations have for years been pressing the publishers of dictionaries to change derogatory definitions. Some have submitted, others have refused.

Last week a 67-year-old textile merchant from Lancashire failed to get High Court backing for his request that the O.E.D. desist from publishing such scurrilous definitions of "Jew" as "grasping usurer" and the like.

The British High Court has refused to intervene to secure the removal of derogatory definitions of "Jew" in the Oxford Dictionary. DAVID LENNON reports.

Children save the wound of being called a yid, dago, kike, wog, alger, wog, mick or whatever, by crying "sticks and stones may break my bones, but words will never hurt me."

Adults know better. They know there is little evidence to support this couplet. Words can hurt.

Actually, Mr. Marcus Sholemovich from Salford was warned. About a month ago O.E.D. Editor Robert Burchfield declared in a speech in Oxford that he would not agree to any changes in the definition because "we are concerned with the accurate recording of the language as it is, not what people think it should be." Words, he insisted, mean what they mean, not what people want them to mean. Definition derives from usage, not from taste.

"Jew — a person of the Hebrew race, an Israelite, applied to a grasping or extortionate usurer, or a trader who drives hard bargains and deals craftily."

• The Oxford English Dictionary: "Jew — to cheat or overreach in the way attributed to Jewish traders or usurers. Hence Jewing."

The culmination of his four-year campaign against these definitions came in the High Court when Sholemovich, who conducted his own case, asserted that these anti-Semitic definitions were "a part of the show pieces of hatred in our midst." He argued that future editions of these influential dictionaries "should not perpetuate these malignant prejudices but should rather eradicate them."

He continued, "Every Jew who reads these dictionaries is defamed. We are living in 1973, not the Middle Ages. The dictionaries should have the decency to make it clear that these definitions of Jew are obsolete and offensive."

The defence counsel for the publishers, Clarendon Press, said that it should not be taken that lexicographers, or the publishers shared the attitude which the usage of the words reflected or that they approved of them.

He argued that the only grounds for possible action was defamation, and that therefore it would be essential for Sholemovich to satisfy the court that the words he complained of referred to him or were capable of being understood by others as referring to him.

Justice Goff found that on the point of law Sholemovich had in fact failed to prove this very point. But he went on: "I want to make it absolutely clear that the law before me is not whether the definitions are right or wrong, whether they are justly applied to all or any Jews or not, or whether the usage is in fact obsolete."

"It is apparent to everybody that there are many fine persons who are Jewish by birth or creed, persons of the utmost integrity, honesty, reputation, skill and ability."

If there were Jews — and no doubt there were — who did not in fact measure up to that standard, there were many people, non-Jews, who were just as bad or worse, and there were many non-Jews to whom those derogatory words could very properly be applied."

Sholemovich's plea that "what is morally wrong cannot be legally right" held no legal water with the Justice and he ordered the writ and statement of claim to be struck out on the ground that there was no cause for action. He also made an order for costs against Sholemovich.

Clarendon Press, to show they are not usurers, undertook not to enforce its costs were estimated at £1,200.

The only consolation for Sholemovich came also in the speech of Burchfield at Oxford. He said that in the vast revision of the O.E.D. which is appearing in the three-volume supplement in 1975 "We shall include a short historical note, in an appendix, explaining how certain uses of the word Jew came about."

The Red Indians did slightly better; the supplement will explain that they are not "savages" as currently defined, but "indigenous people." But Burchfield insists that "niggers" will remain "niggers." So maybe "Jew" didn't do too badly after all.

SOME ALTERNATIVE DEFINITIONS

In an open letter to Mr. R.W. Burchfield, editor of the Oxford English Dictionary, Dr. Alfred Gottschalk, president of Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, Ohio, countered Mr. Burchfield's justification of the dictionary's much-criticized definitions of the word "Jew." Dr. Gottschalk's letter of June 27 states:

"As the editor of perhaps one of the most outstanding and responsible dictionaries in the English language, your answer to the charge leveled against you by Marcus Sholemovich is most inadequate. Since this is a dictionary of contemporary as well as historical usage it would just as easily have been manageable, should you have been so inclined, to give as a secondary and tertiary definition of the word 'Jew': 'a member of a much maligned people which has suffered extinction, butchery, and in our own time are the survivors of a holocaust.' That certainly is in the contemporary mind and part of the parlance of the word 'Jew.' Or you might have tried the following kind of definition: 'member of a heroic people which has rebuilt out of the ashes of a holocaust its own homeland and has achieved a new national identity,' also a commonplace truth of today. Or perhaps you might have tried a definition such as 'a heroic people which despite slanderous designations has managed to produce on a per capita basis the largest number of Nobel Prize winners in the world, has made innumerable contributions to the natural and biological and social sciences, the world of music, art and literature,' but you chose instead as a secondary and tertiary definition, because these were primarily in your mind, not necessarily part of general usage, to depict the Jewish people in a malignant manner.

'As I consider even your primary definition of 'Jew,' it is clearly a racist one, since you categorize him as 'a person of Hebrew race' as an Israelite. I thought that the scientific world had rejected the category of race as a paradigm of definition. A Jew, after all, is a member of the Jewish people and by religion an Israelite. He may also be a member of the Jewish people as a scientist, agnostic or atheist.

'I am grieved by the fact that your own predilections as editor made you exclude all but that definition of 'Jew' which is comfortable and genuine to you and perhaps to those members of a hate-ridden world who have neither compassion nor truth as their standard.'

PERON TURNS AGAINST THE LEFT-WINGERS

By JAMES NEILSON.
BUENOS AIRES (Ofn). — THE new Argentine Government's offensive against left-wing infiltrators into the Peronist movement has picked up steam since the bloody second return of Juan Domingo Peron to his homeland.

After his arrival from his Spanish exile, the Peronist dictator launched in a nationwide broadcast that any "revolution" must take place within the guidelines provided by the law and the Constitution. He also dismissed those intellectuals, both in Argentina and abroad, who had persecuted themselves that Peronism was now a left-wing movement. Speaking sternly, he turned the clock back to 1955, making it clear that — to his mind at least — the authoritarian postulates of the past were as valid as ever.

Since then President Campora, visibly reduced to a shadow of his chief, has ordered the police and the security forces to disarm the terrorist bands and clear the squatters out of the administrative buildings and universities. Left-wingers are branding themselves for a possibly brutal purge.

When Peron called off his scheduled address at the airport here, he not only disappointed a million or more of his followers, with results that may not be apparent for some time, but he also dampened the surging hopes of those who thought the millennium was at hand. Since returning "definitively" to Argentina, Peron has done his best to present himself as a moderate statesman. Many people in his movement think he is more than willing to slough off the left wing in exchange for a close working relationship, if not an outright merger, with the Radicals.

Peron is taking a considerable risk in alienating the Left, whose ideas dominate the Young Peronists as well as the various terrorist movements which have plagued the country in recent years. The Peronists, especially the Trotskyite People's Revolutionary Army, were prepared to make common cause with Peronism as long as it suited their purpose. Now Peron has turned against them, and the 77-year-old caudillo is high on their list of targets for assassination.

The Young Peronists, who provided much of the enthusiasm and organization that gave the Peronists their election victory, are not overjoyed at the prospect of a resurrection of old-style Peronism. Their adherence, moreover, is considerably more fickle than that of their elders. For years they thought Peron a glamorous revolutionary chief, but with a place in their pantheon alongside Ernesto "Che" Guevara and Fidel Castro. Now they find themselves confronted with an elderly and, in many respects, extremely conservative politician.

Peron, apparently, is well aware that he is fighting for his political life as well as for his place in his surging hopes of those who thought the millennium was at hand. He hopes invested in him are so great that he must do great things to satisfy them. Politicians in this extraordinary dynamic but terribly confused in his movement think he is more responsibility for the future. One commonly expressed notion sums up his position: "If Peron succeeds they will build him a monument higher than the pyramids; if he fails he will be strung up in the Plaza de Mayo."

Peron is now trying to wriggle out of this impossible position. By first defusing the near-revolutionary tension and sending out feelers to all political groups except the far Left, he hopes to isolate his fiercest opponents. The Government enjoys the support of both business and the trade unions, with the former doing their best to lower prices and the latter accepting a virtual wage freeze for two years.

Should order quickly return and the economy surge ahead Peron will have won enough respite to liquidate the terrorists. But until that happens the country will have to live with the danger of a terrorist bullet ending Peron's life and pushing the country once more to the brink of civil war.

Monetary upheavals

Davar (Histadrut) writes: "In the short range, the monetary upheavals will have no significant effect on the Israeli economy. The Israel pound is linked to the dollar, and the latter's devaluation means a constant de facto devaluation in relation to the European currencies. This places a burden on import from Europe and encourages export, and is essentially a desirable process — particularly so, with the fluctuation of currency rates ruling out the necessity for formal changes in the rate of the pound. All the same, the process causes an increase in the price of goods imported from Europe, which will — of necessity — be reflected in the market."

Al Hamshehar (Mapam), objecting to the growth in imports from countries where purchasing is becoming more expensive, remarks: "The fact is, that under existing conditions the importer has no interest in diverting his source of import to cheaper countries. On the contrary — the increase in the price of goods raises his profits. And the Government has done nothing so far in the way of bringing its influence to bear on changing the direction of commerce."

Haaretz (non-party) discusses the recommendation by a committee that the telephone services and the mails should become public, semi-independent corporations: "The picture unveiled by the committee is typical of all of other services. The cause lies in the 'age' of the Israeli administration. The 'oldest' in the world, the likes of which is to be found only in the most backward countries — although Israeli society is one of the most dynamic."

BREZHNEV AND THE JACKSON AMENDMENT

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: — Your editorial speculation (June 21) about the erosion of Congressional commitment to the Jackson amendment resulting from the Brezhnev visit conveys a misleading impression of Congressional reaction.

The fact is that the Jackson amendment co-sponsors who attended Brezhnev's lunch and numbers game came away unmoved. There were no uncertainties implanted among them about the value of the amendment, rather uncertainties about the veracity of Brezhnev's data on emigration. Not only did none of them so much as suggest an inclination to withdraw from co-sponsorship, but all who had the opportunity signalled a determination to maintain their support for the amendment.

It is notable that there has not been a single defection from co-sponsorship in either the Senate or House since the amendment was introduced early this year. On the contrary, the ranks of co-sponsors continue to grow, having reached 77 Senators and 284 Representatives.

BIDDING AT MACCABIAH

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: — I regret that the sport of show jumping, which has been a recognized Olympic sport since 1912, will not be represented at the 9th Maccabiah. On my return from representing Israel at a show-jumping competition in California last summer, I suggested the idea of holding an equestrian event to Mr. A. Mos Golan of the Sports Authority, who was most enthusiastic. It had already sounded interestingly known Jewish riders in the U.S. and England, who were responsive to the idea. I had also been promised substantial backing from English horsemen. On Mr. Golan's advice a letter was sent in September 1972 to the Head of the Maccabiah Committee, but unfortunately remained unanswered.

CARELESS BICYCLE RIDERS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: — Must we wait for more fatal accidents to put an end to the undisciplined and careless bicycle riders who ride a) after sunset without lights and safety reflectors, and b) on the wrong side of the road, performing all kinds of stunts, thus endangering their lives and those of others while blaming car drivers. It is high time the authorities did something about these practices to prevent further accidents.

Barbara Tuchman says—

"This is a marvelous memoir — of a woman, a marriage, a country, of farming and fighting, death and sorrow, love and divorce and fame. It is Israel in terms of real people with public faces and private emotions living through historic events. Its anecdotes, like the one of the jeep and Ezer's cousin, are crystals that capture the quality of the nation better than fifty picture books. It is intimate, authentic and true — and good reading from beginning to end."
